EVANESCENCE.

[Harriet Prescott Spofford.]

What's the brightness of a brow?
What's a mouth of pearls and coral?
Beauty vanishes like a vapor,
Preach the men of musty morals.

Should the crowd three ages since,
Have shut their ears to singing Homer,
Because the music died so soon,
As fleets the violet's aroma?

Ah, for me, I thrill to see
The bloom a velvet cheek discloses,
Made of dust—I will believe it!
So are lilies, so are roses.

BIRDS ONLY REPTILES, IN DISGUISE.

London Society.

Everybody is fond of birds, but it is possible that some people might like them less if they believed them to be only reptiles in disguise. Now, Sir John Lubbock, addressing the British Association in 1881, said: "It seems to be generally admitted that birds have come down to us through the Dinosaurians (Wonder-lizards), and as Ruxley has shown, the profound break once supposed to exist between birds and reptiles has been bridged over by the discovery of reptilian birds and bird-like reptiles—so that, in fact, birds are modified reptiles." Popular likes and dislikes are no disproof of relationship. Birds with teeth and reptiles with feathers have been cited in evidence, although, indeed, they are very like "Cuckoo, cuckoo, welcome bird, seldom seen, but often heard" of. Birds and reptiles are alike reproduced from eggs; their blood corpuscles are equally oval, and not round, as in mammalian animals. Both apparently swallow their food without tasting it. Possibly the stomach may be, with them, the seat of taste, as it often is with us when we have taken physic on eaten stale fish or too much sage and onion stuffing with duck. Both are musical. Serpents are fond of melody, though they cannot make it. Lizards, trachians as well as bipeds have their grand united choral societies. American bullfrogs concerts are celebrated as well as numerous attended. The song of thrushes and the wailing of nightingales may therefore be only developments of the green European tree-frog's resonant croak, effected, as with birds, by inflated expansions of the throat, very curious to witness. Froggy looks as proud as his predecessor in the fable, and one wonders that he does not, like him, burst. Feathers may be only a modification of scales. The so-called feathers of butterflies are really scales, whence their name Lepidoptera.

SARATOGA'S RACES.

Correspondence Inter Ocean.

An interesting discussion has been going on for some days, that is just now at its height. It is whether the great race-course here is a benefit or a detriment to the place. Opinions of leading hotel proprietors and landowners differ widely on this point. Says one:

"I have no hesitation in emphatically denouncing our race-course as a nuisance in every way. Saratoga seeks to make its reputation as a select summer resort, where comfort and ease is to be obtained. As a matter of fact, it has ever maintained a reputation for being the resort for the better class of people. The races always attracted a crowd, and a class of persons that are not desirable to have as guests at our hotels, where they seek to mingle with fellow-boarders whose ideas and tastes are not in common. The sporting element always attends the races in force, and the better class of people, who bring their families and seek rest at Saratoga because of its supposed exclusiveness, become disgusted to such an extent that I fear much of the best custom will be driven to other places, unless a stop can be put to these raids by the sporting fraternity."

So much for what one man has to say. On the other hand, the friends of the course insist that it not only adds thousands of dollars to the coffers of the hotel-keepers, but that is appreciated by the majority of the resorters here. They insist that there is too much of the spirit of "exclusiveness" in existence here for the good of the place, and claim that no one class should be allowed to monopolize the beauties of the place.

A PRACTICAL AGRICULTURIST.

New York Sun.

Dakota's aristocrat, the Count de Mores, is a thoroughly practical man of business. Securing a large tract of land in the valley of the Little Missouri, in a region bounded by limitless stock ranges and buffalo and deer walks, he set to work erecting houses, offices, stables, barns, and corrals for his cattle, gathered in a settlement of farmers, provided their families with a church and school house, and took to himself 10,000 head of cattle, many flocks of sheep, and blooded horses. He dealt liberally with his poor neighbors, furnishing them with sheep and cattle to keep on shares, and looked to the organization of a refrigerator-car company, that he might command the means of getting his meat to market. He is said to have spent half a million, and good judges think he will succeed in his undertaking.

CIVILIZATION BADGE.

Anna H. Howard in The Household.

"The collar is the distinctive badge of civilization." So says Prof. Guizot. Only rude and uncivilized people do without collars, or something equivalent.

4 WASHINGTON TAILOR

WHO HAS SUPPLIED SUITS FOR FOUR ADMINISTRATIONS.

Washington Letter.

It is not often the voice of the tailor is heard in criticism of public men. An administration viewed from the standpoint of a tailor has the merit of novelty. A fashionable tailor established himself here during Grant's term, and his experience dates from that time. "We have never begun to sell as many clothes here since Grant went out of office," said he to-day. "I made all of Grant's clothes. He was very liberal and easy to please. The public men of his time were great buyers of clothes. It was a common thing for a senator or member to buy a dozen suits in a year. Grant's cabinet people were very dressy."

"How was it under Hayes?"

"We never did but one job for Hayes. That knocked him cold. He came down one hot summer day during his first year in office, and ordered us to make him a thin sack coat out of the very best gros grain silk. The material was expensive. It cost us exactly $23 to get up that coat. We had heard that he was close, and as we wanted to catch his trade we put the price at $25. That paralyzed him. Oh, how he did kick! But he paid the bill. That was the last order we got from him. He had the rest of his clothes chopped out for him by his old tailor in Fremont. He sent his boys to us for ready-made suits, but we never made any money out of the White House under him. We had some of his cabinet on our books, but there was very little dressing under Hayes. The purchase of clothes by public men fell off 50 per cent. I never expect again to see so much spent in my shop as when Grant was president."

"How was Garfield?"

"He was a very careless dresser. He did not have much taste. He was rather slow pay when he was in congress, but when he went into the White House began to buy a much better grade of clothes and to pay greater attention to dress. The day he was shot he had on a very handsome suit we made for him, price $60. Hayes would have died before he would have paid that money for a suit of clothes."

"Do you do much for President Arthur?"

"Not a dollar's worth. He does business with his old tailor in New York—the man who makes the suits for the members of the Coaching club. He is a very high-priced man. He does not make the plainest business suit under $70. He was over here the other day to take an order for the president. He said he did not care anything for the president's trade. He was too hard to suit. He took up twenty pairs of trousers the other day, made to the president's measure, and spent an hour with him trying them on before he could find a pair to suit. He says the only way he can get along with the president is to be right up and down with him. One day Arthur spoke to him very sharply about the fit of a coat, and the tailor turned his back on him. At least he said he did. Then the president said:

"Oh, come now, don't take any offense. I can't afford to quarrel with you."

"You see, a first-class tailor is a pretty independent man; but while he is particular with the president, he is very careless with the work for the president's servants. We used to furnish the White House liveries, but that job goes to the New York man now. The livery coats of the president's coachmen and footmen, made of cream-colored hammer cloth, cost $125 apiece, but, God bless you! they are the worst fitting things I ever saw, except the clothes the Fremont tailor used to chop out for Hayes."

INTERPRETING TO-DAY'S EVENTS.

THE NOTABLE GRASP OF GREAT MEN ON THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Boston Herald.

It is usual to turn to literature and history for illustrations of the interpretative power, and there are several names that at once occur as instances of the power to detect the changes which are evidently registered in the world's life. There was Napoleon, whose versatility was shown to be greater in nothing than the way in which he felt and acted upon the significance of the moment, whether in the world of thought or action. There was his contemporary, Goethe, whose life and writings are always suggesting the same interpretative power, and whose special characteristic, through a long intellectual career, was that he never failed to correctly interpret the life of each day. Carlyle had something of this power, and it was this that first gained him a hearing. Emerson had it in a supreme degree. You can never read a page of his writing that does not betray a reader of the signs of the times. It is the most wonderful thing in this man that he is always noting what others have semi-unconsciously felt. He has detected the silent forces that are changing the life of society. He surprises you because he reveals the secret that you were looking for. And, next to Emerson was Channing, who deservedly stands as the pioneer of Americans in ethics and literature, and of correctly interpreting the social and religious life of their own time.

In the sphere of American politics

there have been two men who had the wisdom of the event intrusted to them—Abraham Lincoln and William H. Seward; in the sphere of English politics the late Walter Bagehot had this power, which may be traced not more in his work on the British constitution than in his political and financial studies. Mr. Gladstone is to-day perhaps the best-trusted man in England, because, more than any other living Englishman, he is able to express in his public life the living convictions of his countrymen. He knows better than anyone else what the day means, and has the power of detachment, seen in his Homeric studies, by which he can compare the life of the day with what is significant in history. Matthew Arnold is to-day a recognized power in literary criticism because he has been able to connect his criticism with the changes going on in present thought. Henry Ward Beecher is the leader of the American people because, in some respects, he has a unique sense of what is going on in men's minds. There is no manufacturer, no merchant, no public or private person, winning success in life, who is not a close and accurate student of public opinion, and a follower of Webster's advice to read the daily newspaper before breakfast. Down through all the grades of intellectual or industrial activity, the same rule holds good which marks the supreme success of the ablest man, that the man of the surest discernment for the point of transition is the man who commands the hour.

LIVE KNOWLEDGE WANTED.

"Jeff" in Detroit Free Press.

Adams spoke most disrespectfully of the dead tongues, forgetting, perhaps, because it is a classical quotation, that naught but good should be spoken of the dead. He went further, too far I think, when he said that a knowledge of those tongues is a positive injury to the possessor. But it is a little ridiculous to keep a young man five or six years studying a language, all of whose literature can be found in good translations, particularly when hardly any two countries pronounce the principal language, Latin, in the same way, and when even the man who studied Sissero ten years ago would not know Kikero by name if he were introduced to him. It is a waste of time and money and brain, and the colleges may as well admit it and begin to teach live knowledge.

But what about Gov. Butler's declaration to the Williams college boys, the other day, that "the writing of verses and fiction is the very lowest exercise of the human intellect." Shall we accept also George the Second's frank admission: "I hate bawling and boozing," and vote all polite learning a humbug and a snare? Or shall we say, with the British parent: "I don't want my boy to learn no nonsense about jaggraff and readin' and writin' and stuff. Give him a plain business education?" Perhaps that would be going too far. A little fiction and poetry don't do a great deal of harm, even if they do not teach one how to run a steam engine or build a bridge.

It is curious to hear this kind of officialdom in cultured Boston, of all places in the world. Chicago or Omaha might be expected to proclaim the frivolousness of literature, as compared with the solid advantages of pork packing and wheat cornering, but the modern Athens should never go back on its Greek.

HORSE CULTURE IN BOSTON.

Cor. Philadelphia Press.

A long line of horses stand ready harnessed to take the street cars around an up-grade corner in Boston. The horses are so placed in a line as to be taken each in its due turn. Just now the writer observed that the instant the driver detailed for the purpose was out of sight around the corner, a horse whose turn would come next deliberately walked down the line and placed himself last in the line; the last, thus, to be used. Watching closely he noticed that it was but one horse that did this, did it so invariably, and not until the driver was out of sight around the corner, as to make it impossible that it was done to escape work. Could a horse be that intelligent anywhere outside of New England? As to the morality of the act alas! alas!

A NEW METHOD OF WHEAT CULTURE.

Ferre Haute Mail.

An Englishman, Major Hallet by name, has discounted the celebrated performance of making two blades of grass grow where but one grew before. He has discovered that wheat planted at distances of a foot between each stalk will produce two or three times the ordinary yield. He raised in this way 216 bushels on three acres, or an average of 72 bushels an acre. Both the ears and grains grew very much larger than in wheat cultivated in the ordinary way. The new method is called "thin planting," and is worth the attention and experiment of farmers.

OUR MICA MINE.

Boston Budget.

North Carolina has almost a monopoly in mica production, with thirty-two mines in two counties west of the Blue ridge and scattering ones in others. The rock is practically an extremely coarse granite, with the quartz, feldspar and mica in great masses. The latter comes out in shapeless lumps, often weighing hundreds of pounds. It is split up into sheets about the thickness of cardboard and then trimmed into square, made as large as possible.

BUYING A WAR TURKEY WITH

ADVERTISING BILLS.

Muldoon, Major H. A., in Philadelphia Times.

My adopted state used to send us a horse medicine called the Mexican Mustang Liniment. Around each bottle of the liniment there was an advertising card printed in the form and similitude of a fifty-dollar bank bill. These bills were exceedingly like the Confederate money in color, while in finish and general make-up they were actually superior to that agile and somewhat gymnastic currency.

One day, as they were opening a box of liniment, an Irishman, Patrick Sullivan by name, whose patriotism was mostly of the foraging and larcenous order, asked for "them Mexican shkin plasters and got them. Shortly after this, as we were passing a farmer's house, I saw a fine, large turkey sitting on the sill of the window that had once let the blessed sunlight into that farmer's parlor. Many were the wistful looks cast towards that national bird as he sat there, solitary and alone, excepting the farmer's daughter, who seemed to be the turkey's guardian angel.

Now, we were out of turkey just then.

Besides, I felt, deep down in my heart of hearts, that some patriot would steal that turkey before morning. That it was, I suppose, combined with my strong natural liking for guardian angels of that particular age and sex, that led me to resolve to buy the bird.

Calling up Pat, I gave him a five-dollar greenback and told him to buy the bird. Pat returned very shortly with the bird and the bill.

"How is this?" I demanded. "Did I not tell you to buy that turkey?"

"And, be gorra!" he replied, "didn't I buy it? but the girl would not take the greenbacks, sor. She wanted Confederate money, and, be gorra, I gave her one of those Mexican shkin plasters and got the bird and forty-five dollars in greenbacks."

THE DWARF'S DIGNITY.

"Squid" in Music and Drama.

Tom Thumb ceased to be a dwarf several years ago, and endeavored to be one of the boys. He played poker, kept fast horses, sailed a yacht, and had theories about different brands of whisky. His marriage reformed him, and he seemed very happy with his charming wife, who took almost a motherly care of him.

Tom Thumb's life was Barnumized. Seeing him in public, you wondered what view of the world a dwarf would take; but, in private, he was just like any other man of his age, fortune and celebrity. His tiny chairs and tables, carriages and horses, were all for the show. In private you could not insult him more than to make any difference between him and full-grown people. He sat up at the same table, in the same sort of a chair, and took his full share of the eatables and drinkables, so that you soon lost all sense of his small size.

Indeed, when you came to know his wife she impresses you as a very large lady, so excellent is her common sense and so great her personal dignity. When I first became acquainted with her I stooped to lift her to a seat, as if she were a child or a doll, and she gave me one look that nipped my unwelcome civility in the bud. Now I should as soon think of lifting Rose Coghan or a pyramid.

EDUCATIONAL REVIVAL IN THE SOUTH.

New York Sun.

Prof. A. D. Mayo has returned to Boston from a trip to the southern states. He says that there has been an educational revival in most of them, particularly the Virginias and Carolinas. The grants made by philanthropists for the establishment of schools for colored young people have been wisely utilized and have had an important influence. Young men and women educated in the normal schools have done effective work as teachers among their own people. The Virginia colleges supply the greater number of the male white teachers. The women teachers are largely drawn from families impoverished by the war. There are, of course, many drawbacks, arising in the country districts from the sparse population and the poverty of the people, and in the cities and villages from the decided objection of the people to be taxed for educational purposes. Prof. Mayo suggests the consolidation of the southern colleges and normal academies; the establishment of normal schools in the states not yet provided with them; the establishment of industrial schools; national aid, either in the shape of grants or loans.

THE ROOMS IN WHICH GEN. AND MRS. WASHINGTON DIED.

New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The room in which Washington died is a very little and very plain affair, and the bed on which he breathed his last is plainer still. A piece of furniture like the bedstead would, if it could be obtained, cost in these times about $6 or $8. It was probably thought to be a grand piece of furniture in its day. The room in which Mrs. Washington died is a little garret. A dozen people could not crowd into it with any sort of comfort. Why Mrs. Washington selected that room to die in is one of the things that is not explained. From the time she went into the room, on the occasion of her last sickness, until she was carried out to be buried, no one saw her save the nurse who waited on her.

The latest reports place Hoadley's majority in Ohio at 12,400.

Two new ocean cables will be laid by John W. Mackey and James Gordon Bennett.

Several persons are boring for oil in Bourbon county, and expect to find it in paying quantities.

SINCE September 1st the earnings of the Pullman sleeping cars have shown an average increase of $3,000 a day.

SUNSET Cox says "you might as well expect to run a powder mill in hell as an honest government with an overflowing treasury."

The New York Sun says now that the Ohio Legislature is assuredly Democratic, a strong desire is expressed by the best men of the party for the return of Mr. Thurman to the U. S. Senate.

The town of Wapakoneta, Ohio, has adopted an ordinance giving saloon keepers the right to open their houses for business on Sunday, and the place is all torn up over the matter in consequence.

The remains of Confederate dead, disinterred at Arlington, were received at Norfolk by the firing of minute guns and the tolling of bells. Flags were at half-mast, and there were many floral offerings.

A MASSACHUSETTS statute provides that the Board of Health, Lunacy and Charity "shall consist of nine persons." The Attorney General rules that a woman is not a "person," and hence Mrs. Clara Leonard, who has been elected to the Board, can not take her seat.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court has sustained the decision of the Superior Court that a common victualer, licensed to sell liquor, is guilty of keeping a public bar. Under this decision it is claimed that the public bar of nearly every hotel in Massachusetts can be closed.

THERE are now confined in the Kentucky penitentiary 449 convicts, and about the same number are at work on the railroad in Eastern Kentucky. Of the number in prison fifty-eight white males, twenty-eight colored males and five colored females are under sentence for life.

Hoadley's majority over Foraker in Hamilton county, according to official count is 2,531. The vote on the prohibition amendment is—yes, 8,402; no, 41,407. For the regulation of the liquor traffic—yes, 14,780; no, 34,375. Waterman and Cary are the Democrats who are defeated for the Legislature by Peete and Stryker. Wabnitz (Rep.) has a majority for County Commissioner over Hugh Campbell of 1,105.

SECRET SERVICE agents have seized six sets of steel dies for making gold quarters and half-dollar pieces in San Francisco. They were in the possession of a jeweler. The manufacture of these small coins has been on a large scale. It is said the quarters cost only seven cents to make, and the half-dollars fifteen cents. Large quantities of them were sold to immigrants. Criminal proceedings have been suspended pending advice from Washington.

A curious Georgia industry is the making of wrapping paper out of rice straw and palm leaves. A factory located at Savannah is now turning out four tons a day of excellent paper. It is 87 per cent. rice straw and 12 per cent. palm leaves. It is of superior quality, and can be made 20 per cent. cheaper than paper made of jute-batts and rags. The rice straw and palm leaves have heretofore been waste. It now yields to the one factory $400 a day, keeps money at home, and gives employment to idle hands.

The Ashland Independent says: On the day before his death Craft asked jailer Tyree what he thought of his case. Tyree replied that he thought him a guilty man. "Why do you think I am guilty?" he asked. "Because," replied Tyree, "I read the evidence in the first trial, and heard it in the second, and I could come to no other conclusion." To this Craft said: "Well, I am not guilty. The parties who are will be found out some day, but they will never confess it. A man who would commit such a crime could not expect forgiveness, therefore he would continue to deny it to the last." As he stated his views of what a supposititious person would do in his place, so he acted in that place. To stick to the lie that he was innocent was a very venial sin as compared with the crimes he had committed; and for the sake of his relatives he would maintain that he was not guilty.

CIVIL RIGHTS.

An Outline of Justice Bradley's Opinion in the Case.

The following is a synopsis of the opinion of Justice Bradley in the civil rights cases:

First—That Congress had no constitutional authority to pass the section in question in either the Thirteenth or Fourteenth amendments to the Constitution.

Second—That the Fourteenth amendment is prohibitory upon the States only, and that the legislation authorized to be adopted by Congress for enforcing that amendment is not direct legislation on the matters pending by which the States are prohibited from making or enforcing certain laws ordaining certain acts, but is corrective legislation, necessary or proper for counteracting and redressing the effects of such laws or acts; that in forbidding the States, for example, to deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, and giving Congress the power to enforce prohibition, it was not intended to give Congress power to provide due process of law for the protection of life, liberty and property (which would embrace all subjects of legislation), but to provide modes or redress for countervailing the operation and enforcement of laws obnoxious to prohibition.

Third—That the Thirteenth amendment gives no power to Congress to pass the sections referred to, because that amendment relates only to slavery and involuntary servitude, which it abolishes, and gives Congress the power to pass laws for its enforcement; that this power only extends to the subject matter of the amendment itself, namely, slavery and involuntary servitude and the necessary incidents and consequences of these conditions; that it has nothing to do with the different races or colors, but only refers to slavery, the legal equality of the different races and classes of citizens being provided for in the Fourteenth amendment, which prohibits the States from doing anything to interfere with such equality; that it is not an infringement of the Thirteenth amendment to refuse to any person equal accommodations and privileges in an inn or place of public entertainment, however it may be violative of his legal rights; that it imposes upon him no badge of slavery or involuntary servitude which in any way subjects him to the different races or colors, and the incapacity incident thereto as such as the inability to hold property, to make contracts, to be parties in court, and that if the original civil rights act, which abolished these incapacities, might be supported by the Thirteenth amendment it does not therefore follow that the act of 1875 can be supported by it.

Fourth—That this decision affects only the validity of the law in the States, and not the Territories or District of Columbia, where the legislative power of Congress is unlimited, and it does not undertake to decide what Congress might or might not do under its power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and amongst the several States, the law not being drawn with any such view.

Fifth—That therefore it is the opinion of the court that the first and second sections of the act of Congress of March 3, 1875, entitled "An act to protect all citizens in their civil and legal rights," are unconstitutional and void, and judgment should be rendered upon the indictments accordingly.

Women of the World.

The Empress Eugenie has made herself very popular among the regiments at Aldershot by her frequent visits to the barracks. She may be looking for a new husband.

The handsome monument recently erected over the grave of "Betty" Bonaparte in a Baltimore cemetery bears this inscription: "After life's fitful fever she sleeps well."

Miss Louise Carey has had painted for herself a decorative work in several panels containing figures from the various operas in which she has been a favorite with the public.

"There is one thing at least about our Mary of which the whole country feels proud," remarks a Kentucky editor, "and that is that she has no Freddie a tugging after her."

Mrs. Senator Tabor No. 1 has refused to pay a bill of $5,000 rendered her by her lawyer in the divorce suit which she brought against her husband, and is fighting for a reduction in the courts.

Miss Pope, the young woman of Waukesha, Wis., who married William Conlin and left him on the same day, says that she did so because he asked her if she had furniture, winter wood, money to pay the rent, and similar questions before they were married an hour.

Some Names in Print.

Mrs. Cornwallis West, the English beauty who is coming to this country, is a widow. It is more than likely that Mrs. Cornwallis will soon surrender to some handsome American.

James Berry, a friend of Marwood, the late English "Jack Ketch," has been appointed public executioner by the London corporation. He is about thirty years of age, and was formerly a member of the Bradford police.

Whittier received $100 for his latest fourteen line sonnet, or about $1 for every word. The publishers of a Boston paper for young people are to pay Tennyson $1,000 for a poem which he will write for them some time this year.

Flood, the richest man in California, is preparing to build a $3,000,000 palace on Nob Hill, San Francisco. He will import brown stone for the purpose from New York. Fair, his partner, is also thought to be in the palace-building mood.

Matters of Wordly Interest.

The Ohio penitentiary cleared over $8,000 last month.

Mariboro, Conn., cremates 300,000 bushels of charcoal yearly.

The Wyoming county, N. Y., plum crop is estimated to be worth $7,200.

New Tacoma, the western terminus of the Northern Pacific railroad, has a population of 4,000. Situated on an arm of Puget Sound, it possesses a magnificent harbor, four miles in width, and is too deep in places, for vessels to anchor in. The town is now having a great boom, and lots are selling at fabulous prices.

Much excitement was caused by the royal directors of the Berlin and Potsdam railway refusing, at any rate for the present, to acknowledge any obligation on their part to indemnify the relations of the victims of the late disaster at Steglitz. The investigation into the cause of the accident, however, has not yet been concluded.

This rate of rent for the better class of dwellings in this city is very low, while on the other hand the price charged for cheaper tenements, in many cases, is exorbitant. This condition of things bears heavily upon the poor class of renters.

The following marriage licenses have been issued in Brown county, Ohio, since our last report:

Isaac Williams and Dollie S. Lair.
Jacob Grov and Emma Griffith.
Lewis K. Scott and Nancy Shaw.
Ismael Cochran and Sallie Warren.

A LETTER from Mr. Winfield Buckler, county attorney for Robertson county, concerning his action at the exorbitant trial of Samuel Rogers and his son, is printed elsewhere. Mr. Buckler considers that the comments of some of the State papers on the subject have done him injustice, and he desires, therefore to be heard.

JOHN WHEELER was, yesterday, the maddest man in Maysville. An old sow that had been lounging in one of the many wallows on Market street, thinking it was about luncheon time, coolly walked off with a basket of fish that had been left outside the door. The basket was not even returned. Maysville hogs, we believe, could pick pockets if there was anything to eat in the pocket-book.

WHAT has been done at Maysville can be done in Louisville, and in many other towns in the State more advantageously located than Maysville.—Louisville Commercial.

Not until you have the same kind of population. This community is liberal, enterprising and quick in action, and that is why Maysville in the matter of encouraging manufactures and inaugurating public improvements of all kinds is so far ahead of all other places in the State, not excepting even the great city of Louisville.

Lecture and Readings.

The multitude who heard Mr. Gilbert's lecture on "What shall we laugh at?" for the benefit of the sufferers by the flood, will be interested in the announcement that there will be three entertainments at the Christian Church, consisting of a lecture narrating his personal experiences in Jerusalem, the Holy City, and two evenings of readings, prose and poetic, serious, pathetic, humorous and old, the first of which will be given on Friday night, Oct. 26th. The proceedings are to be applied to carpeting the Sunday school room and supplying it with an organ. The price of tickets has been placed at the low sum of fifty cents for the entire course. A large number are already sold. Only enough will be sold to seat the church comfortably. They can be obtained at Kackley's and Philater's. The price of single admission will be much higher.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. Tom. Nest lost a shoe at the fair. We don't know it happened, but she slipped it off and it fell through a crack and before her better-half could get around some one had made off with it. This is the fruits of wearing tight shoes.

Miss Mattie Cord spent last week with Mrs. Wilton at Germantown, and attended the fair.

SYNTAX.
The Rogers Case—Explanation by Mr. Buckler.

Ed. Bulletin: The Republican states in its last issue that I resorted to the illegal proceeding of trying to swear the magistrates off the bench in the Rogers case. That statement needs an explanation.

Both the magistrates sitting in the case had expressed themselves that Rogers was justifiable in the killing, and I had many other good reasons to know that the Commonwealth could not receive at their hands a fair trial. I had them both summoned to testify on behalf of the Commonwealth, having as one of my reasons for so doing that they might retire without any mortification, and with credit to themselves. The opportunity was not accepted by either. Believing that they would not retire, I made, to defendant's counsel, a proposition, owing to the general belief, and my own belief that Mr. Rogers would be "white washed" if he was tried before that Court, that we would agree to let two good unbiased Justices try the case, against whom there could be no objection. This proposition was promptly refused by the leading counsel for the defendant. Seeing that the magistrates were determined to stick, and that the defendant was determined to have them stick, I then offered to file my affidavit stating that the Commonwealth could not get a fair trial at the hands of that Court, still hoping that the magistrates would take the hint, and that decency would persuade them to retire from a seat that they had disgraced. The filing of the paper was refused. I then offered to file my grounds to dismiss the case—this the Court refused to file. I then moved to dismiss the case, and strange to relate, the defendant objected to being released—this objection the Court sustained. I refused to introduce any evidence before a Court that I had sworn would do anything illegal, or do Sam. Rogers a single injustice, but I did not propose to give him the prestige of an acquittal at the hands of a packed Court.

If he had as good a case as his attorneys claim for him, I could see no wrong in having it investigated before an impartial tribunal, nor the object he had in holding with such tenacity to the Court against which there were such serious objections. Respectfully,
WINFIELD BUCKLER.

Many forget that the hair and scalp need cleansing as well as the hands and feet. Extensive use of Ayer's Hair Vigor has proven that it is the best cleansing agent for the hair—that it prevents as well as removes dandruff, cools and soothes the scalp, and stimulates the hair to renewed growth and beauty.

SCARCE OF AMMUNITION.

When it became evident that Vicksburg would be isolated and must stand siege, strict orders were issued regarding ammunition. A majority of the Confederate troops were armed with muskets requiring caps, and some companies had the shot-guns and rifles brought from home. Percussion caps had to run the blockade by sea or land, and those which reached Vicksburg were brought in by single couriers. They were landed as carefully as gold dollars and doled out as gingerly as precious wine. One courier who got in with 16,000 caps in his person was nine days traveling a distance of thirteen miles through the swamps, and was fired upon more than a score of times. Another with his valuable load entered the lines with three serious wounds, and all others had perilous adventures and narrow escapes. The Federals captured numbers of these couriers and secured over 500,000 of the caps so badly needed inside of the Confederate lines. Details of men, acting under orders from headquarters, made it a business to gather up every cannon ball and unexploded shell thrown from the fleet, and the defective shell was refused or re-capped and sent to the gun it would fit. Thousands of Federal missiles were thus hurled back against those who fired them. Field batteries were cautioned not to fire a shot unless in repelling an attack, and the infantry pickets had orders to refrain from wasting a bullet, no matter what course the Federal pickets took.

COLOR-HEARING.

H. de Parville, Popular Science Monthly. Popular expressions are often very significant. "I saw three dozen lights of all colors," or some similar expression, may frequently be heard from persons who have received violent blows on the head or face. Under the influence of shocks of this kind, the eye really seems to see infinite numbers of sparks. Shocks of a certain class impressed upon the nervous system seem to have the faculty of producing phenomena of light. This remark has been suggested by the facts we are about to relate, which led us to suppose that sonorous vibrations are susceptible in certain cases of provoking luminous sensations. There are, in fact, persons who are endowed with such sensibility that they cannot hear a sound without at the same time perceiving colors. Each sound to them has its peculiar color; this word corresponds with red and that one with green, one note is blue and another is yellow. This phenomenon, "color-hearing," as the English call it, has been hitherto little observed. Dr. Nussbaumer, of Vienna, appears to have been the first person who took serious notice of it. While still a child, when playing one day with his brother, striking a fork against a glass to hear the ringing, he discovered that he saw colors at the same time that he perceived the sound; and so well did he discern the color that, when he stopped his ears, he could divine by it how loud a sound the fork had produced. His brother also had similar experiences. Dr. Nussbaumer was afterward able to add to his own observations nearly identical ones made by a medical student in Zurich. To this young man, musical notes were translated by certain fixed colors. The high notes indeed clear colors, and the low notes dull ones. More recently, M. Pedrono, an ophthalmologist of Nantes, has observed the same peculiarities in one of his friends.

THE SOUTHERN DUDE.

Boston Traveler's Washington Letter. There is nothing in "heaven above or in the earth beneath" like the Southern dude. He occupies a niche in humanity all by himself, and he would not deign to look down upon his Northern brother. The Southern dude is a study. I saw one at the National hotel the other evening, and he made me feel very tired. He was a tall, dark-complexioned, tender young thing, on whose cheek probably twenty summers had had their play. On his head he wore a low-crowned straw hat with an immense brim, and one eye-glass was glued in position while its owner stood in the front entrance of the hotel and "gave the girls a treat." The words in quotation are his own, and when I heard them I felt like kicking him into the "erstwhile." He wore a black broadcloth suit, and although the thermometer was up in the nineties, his hands were covered with tight-fitting black kid gloves. His coat was cut in the Prince Albert style, with the lower button only fastened, and that left an immense expanse of shirt front, upon which nestled three tiny diamonds. "Mr. Dude" gazed at these diamonds on an average of four times a minute for an hour to my certain knowledge. His boots were square-toed, with heels certainly three inches high. In his hand he carried a small gold-headed cane, which occasionally he sucked with a listless air. Finally he lodged into a druggist's and started a wild, lurid debauch with glass of plain soda.

HIS FIRST RIDE.

Chicago Tribune. One who knows him well vouches for the truth of the story that the first time Phil Sheridan was ever on a horse was when Billy Seymour, a boy in Perry county, Ohio, put him on a fiery animal, unsaddled, unbridled, and told him to hold on with his knees. And he did until the horse had galloped about two miles across an open country. When the beast came to a halt, Phil was still on his back holding on with his knees. It became the talk of the country. Gossip was scarce in those days.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfillment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.
